20. Open Door Policy

Employee relationship with the company/management is an extremely important one and the best way to develop a lasting relationship is to be honest, open and frank. It is important that any problems be discussed openly, so that a fair solution can be reached. Most problems can be solved, but if they are not discussed when they first occur, they usually become more serious.

An informal discussion between an employee and their supervisor is recognized as the most effective means of preventing and solving problems. It is Affine's policy to assure each employee that it is his/her right and privilege to follow a formal procedure without fear of censure or reprisal. When a problem arises, discussing it with your supervisor is encouraged as a first step. If you do not believe a discussion with your supervisor is appropriate or the problem was not resolved, request a meeting with the higher authority.

Annexure 6: Affine System & Internet Usage policy

IT department's intentions for publishing an acceptable-use policy are not to impose restrictions that are contrary to AFFINE established culture of openness, trust and integrity. IT department is committed to protecting AFFINE employees, partners, and the company from illegal or damaging actions by individuals, either knowingly or unknowingly. Internet, intranet, and extranet related systems including but not limited to computer equipment, software, operating systems, storage media, network account's providing e-mail, WWW browsing, and FTP, are property of AFFINE. These systems are to be used for business purposes in serving the interests of the company and of our clients and customers in the course of normal operation. Please review our human resources policies for further details. Effective security is a team effort involving the participation and support of every AFFINE employee and affiliate that deals with information or information systems. It is the responsibility of every computer user to know these guidelines and to conduct activities accordingly.

Objective

The purpose of this policy is to outline the acceptable use of computer equipment at AFFINE. These rules are in place to protect the employee and AFFINE. Inappropriate use exposes AFFINE to risks, including virus attacks, compromise of network systems and services, and legal issues.

This policy is established to achieve the following:

- To ensure compliance with applicable standards regarding the management of information resources
- To establish prudent and acceptable practices regarding the use of information resources
- To educate individuals who may use information resources with respect to their responsibilities associated with such use

Scope

This policy applies to employees (full-time, Contractual & contingent workers) at AFFINE including all personnel affiliated with third parties. This policy applies to all equipment that is owned or leased by AFFINE.

General use and ownership

While AFFINE INC. network administration desires to provide reasonable level of privacy, users should be aware that the data they create on the corporate systems remains the property of AFFINE INC. Individual departments are responsible for creating guidelines concerning personal use of internet/intranet/extranet systems. In the absence of such policies, employees should be guided by departmental policies on personal use, and, if there is any uncertainty, employees should consult their supervisor or manager.

IT department recommends that any information that users consider sensitive or vulnerable be encrypted. For guidelines on information classification, see “Data classification policy”. For guidelines on encrypting e-mail and documents, go to “Cryptography control policy”.

For security and network maintenance purposes, authorized individuals within AFFINE may monitor equipment, systems, and network traffic at any time, as per “System administration operating procedure”.

AFFINE reserves the right to audit networks and systems on a periodic basis to ensure compliance with this policy.

Security and proprietary information

The user interface for information contained on internet/intranet/extranet related systems should be classified as either confidential or not confidential, as defined by corporate confidentiality guidelines, details of which can be found in human resources policies.

Examples of confidential information include, but are not limited to, company private, corporate strategy, competitor sensitive, trade secret, specification, customer list, and research data information. Employees should take all necessary steps to prevent unauthorized access to this information.

Keep passwords secure and do not share accounts. Authorized users are responsible for the security of their passwords and accounts. System-level passwords should be changed quarterly; user-level passwords should be changed every quarterly.

All PC's, laptops, and workstations should be secured with a password-protected screensaver with the automatic activation feature set at ten minutes or less, or by logging off (control-alt- delete for Win2k users) when the host will be unattended.

Use encryption of information in compliance with IT department “Cryptography control policy”.

Because information contained on portable computers is especially vulnerable, special care should be exercised. Protect laptops in accordance with the laptop security tips.

Whenever taking a call from the media, the same courtesy and professionalism in which we approach customers should be displayed toward the media. Please act quickly when approached by the media to ensure that the reporter's deadline is met. This is important because the way this call is handled may be the reporter's first impression of Affine and that first impression may end up in the story published or the news segment broadcast. In order to promote our customer service image, it is important to respond quickly, courteously and professionally to all media calls.

Please remember to contact corporate communications if and when you have been approached by the media. Even though you have referred the media, Corporate communications will need your help to prepare a response. Do not let a reporter compel you to answer questions on the spot. It is always beneficial to prepare in advance in order to provide accurate and relevant information. In the event that you are approached by media to make personal comments on social issues and the reporter asks you for the organization details, please ensure that you make it clear that the comments are personal opinion and hence you would like to keep it that way.

Guidelines for Photographs and Film

A similar process as described above will be used when someone from the media is requesting permission to take photographs or to film inside our facilities. Refer the caller to Corporate Communications. No one will be given access to your facility for a photo or filming without approval from Corporate Communications, and equally important, Corporate Communications will not give approval without talking in advance with the manager of the facility. This is a joint decision between the facility and Corporate Communications. Decisions will be based upon a number of considerations including but not limited to:

- What does Affine have to gain from the photo and filming?
- How much disruption will this cause to operations?
- What is the age and condition of the facility?
- Does the facility look “picture perfect” good?

A reporter or camera crew may show up unannounced at the facility. This is most likely to occur in crisis situations at facilities or within one of the communities we serve. Or, it could occur if the media learned about an event at the facility from an external source who has organized a demonstration or boycott.

Please know that Corporate Communications will not send the media to any company operating facility without prior approval by the facility manager. When dealing with reporters and camera crews who may show up unannounced, the facility manager and staff should act with the same courtesy and professionalism as we approach customers. Contact Corporate Communications immediately and let them know which news source is there.

Corporate Communications will contact the camera crew’s news room or the print photographer’s editor for clarification.

We cannot prevent the filming or photographing of common areas outside of our facilities which we do not operate. Examples would include public parking lots, courtyards and walk ways.

The following guidelines should be used when television camera crews or print photographers show up unannounced at your facility.

- Although we cannot prevent the media from photographing or filming the exterior of our facilities, we will contact their news room and/or editors for clarification
- The media cannot enter our facility to photograph or film without permission

AFFINE COMMAND THE NEW

- The media cannot block the entrance to our facility or prevent people from entering our facility or conducting business as usual
- We can inform the media if our customers complain about the inconvenience caused in the parking lot or walkways

Be courteous and friendly, but also remember that no matter how congenial or affirming the reporter, photographer or camera crew are, everything you say and do may be observed and reported by the media representative who is trying to make the facility come alive for his/her audience.

Guidelines for Seeking Media Coverage

In circumstances in which you believe you have a positive news story to share with the public, contact Corporate Communications. It is the only department authorized to distribute Affine news releases, pitch coverage of particular events or hold news conferences.

- Do not call a reporter directly without first consulting Corporate Communications—even if they are your friends
- Corporate Communications will work with you to gather information and determine if and how the news media should be contacted. Similar measures used by editors and reporters will be considered to determine if your story is newsworthy
- Some news items may be more appropriate for internal publicity such as the Affine employee newsletter or other forms of employee communications. Do not share it under any circumstance with any third person as you cannot be sure how it may land up with the media house

This handbook is composed of general statements of the company's current policies, rules, procedures and benefits. We feel strongly that we must retain flexibility to meet future economic challenges. Accordingly, the company reserves the right to amend, modify and/or eliminate any of these policies, rules, procedures and benefits at anytime at the company's sole discretion, with or without prior notice. On termination for any reason, you are only entitled to those benefits that are offered at the time your separation takes place. Any benefits offered in this manual apply only so long as the manual is current. They do not provide vested rights.

This handbook supersedes any previous oral or written provisions, descriptions or understandings of the company's policies, rules, procedures and benefits. Any variation from these policies will only be made upon written approval from management of the company.
